Introducing Kork

camira

www.camirafabrics.com

A modern take on a rustic material, Kork blends natural beauty with a stylized aesthetic. With its raw composition softened by its sleek tactility, the organic pattern inherent to the bark of the cork tree is showcased through its delicate coloration, making it the ideal material to bring a hint of biophilia to any interior.

Sustainable style

Crafted from sustainably and responsibly sourced Portuguese cork, this innovative application for vertical surfaces truly encapsulates designing with nature.

Rapidly renewable, the cork tree is unique in its ability to provide wood for use in manufacturing simply by stripping its bark. Able to be harvested every seven to ten years, each tree can live for over three centuries – ensuring a continuous and environmentally-friendly source of material.

With each tree absorbing over five times as much carbon dioxide once its bark has been harvested, the production of cork is an effective means of reducing harmful CO₂ levels, with forests in Portugal alone offsetting 10 million tons every single year.

Crafted from nature, colored by experts

Available in 7 subtle hues, Kork is a delicate addition to any interior space. Retaining the natural beauty of the material's origin, each shade has been developed in harmony with its composition – with muted neutrals complemented by deep, rustic tones, the color palette evokes its Portuguese forest origins.

Complementary products

Expertly colored to complement a range of Camira textiles, Kork can be used alongside our sustainable woollen textiles, Main Line Flax and Blazer, to create a beautiful mix of textures. For a trend-led aesthetic, the sleekness of its touch is perfectly complemented by the leather-look vinyl, Port.

Versatile, sustainable, and created from one of nature's oldest materials, Kork is a contemporary yet timeless addition to our collection of vertical offerings.
